

Aicon 56 "Wicked" - 2006

Boat ID: 4822

Date: October 17, 2020

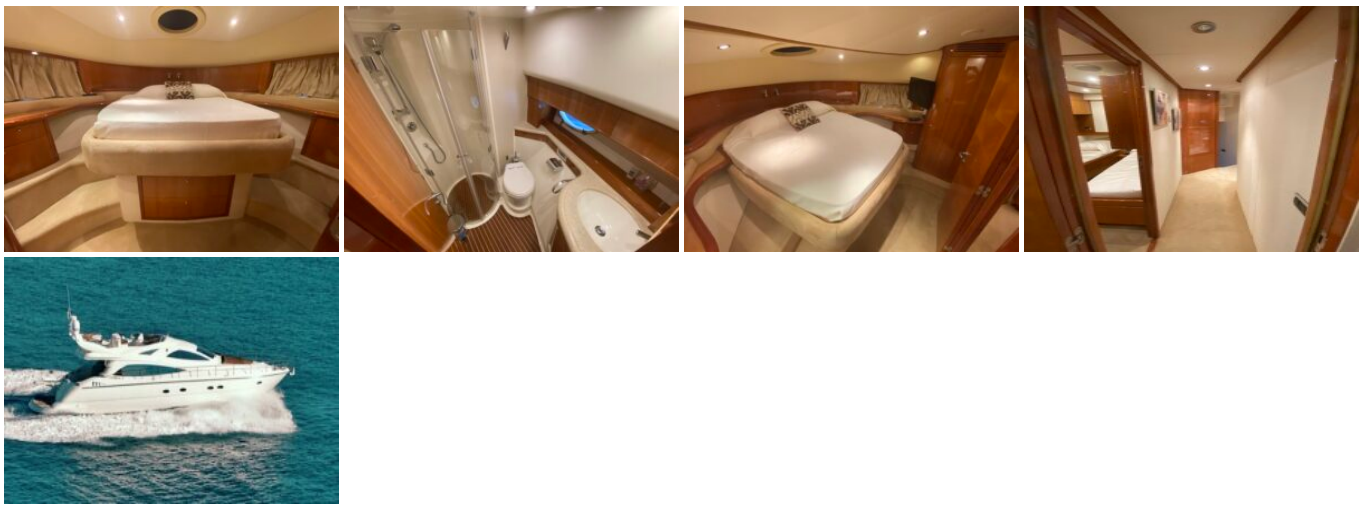

With 22.4 degrees of deadrise amidships and 16.8 degrees at the transom, the 56 is well suited for offshore service. While sea conditions were mild during our test, several stout wakes gave me the sense that the 56 will deliver a soft, dry ride. She is responsive to the throttle, accelerates evenly and is predictable in high-speed turns, however, her power steering did not operate properly during our sea trial (the problem turned out to be a spent hydraulic pump).

Sound levels were quite reasonable, although her underwater exhaust musters a throaty grumble at transition speed, as the boat climbs to plane. This is not uncommon, however, Aicon plans to incorporate a muffler in the design.

Sight lines from the flying bridge and the interior helm are excellent, and a bow thruster is provided for wiggling out of tight spots.
